Call for Papers: Teaching the Christian Intellectual Tradition Conference

Samford University
Birmingham, AL * October 6-8, 2016

Teaching the Reformations

Samford University is proud to announce its second biennial conference on "Teaching the Christian Intellectual Tradition." Samford is committed to teaching this tradition, and we seek to create a network of universities and scholars devoted to similar ends. Each conference focuses on a different figure or theme and will equip undergraduate faculty with effective strategies for teaching the Christian Intellectual Tradition in a variety of courses across the curriculum. The focus of this year's conference is "Teaching the Reformations."

This conference is designed to encourage excellence in undergraduate teaching across the curriculum, with a particular emphasis on core curriculum and general education courses. Both specialists and non-specialists are encouraged to submit paper proposals. However, proposals should be designed with the non-specialist audience in mind and should directly address curricular and/or teaching strategies.

For more information on submitting a proposal, please visit the event website.

Proposals are due June 1, 2016, and presenters will be notified of acceptance by June 15, 2016.
